The Crater Planning District is comprised of 11 local governments in south central Virginia. These are: the cities of Colonial Heights, Emporia, Hopewell and Petersburg, and the counties of Charles City, Chesterfield, Dinwiddie, Greenville, Prince George, Surry and Sussex.

One of 21 planning districts, the Commission was established in May, 1970, pursuant to the Virginia Area Development Act. The member local governing bodies appoint the policy board, which is composed of twenty-eight individuals, a majority of whom are local elected officials.

The Commission's purpose, as stated in the Charter, is to, "promote the orderly and efficient development of the physical, social and economic elements of the Planning District by planning, and encouraging and assisting governmental subdivisions to plan for the future."

A major focus of the Commission's Work Program is economic and small business development, reflecting the priorities established by the member localities. Currently, the Commission is working very closely with Fort Lee in regard to the impacts of the BRAC-related growth on the surrounding localities, as well as the Crater region. Another important work area involves environmental issues, in response to local needs, as well as increasing state regulation. These include: Chesapeake Bay Preservation Act – local ramifications, air quality standards and solid waste management. The Commission also addresses regional transportation issues and assists localities in their transportation planning efforts. As a certified economic development district by the U.S. Economic Development Administration, the Commission oversees development of the District's 5-year Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy (CEDS) which is updated annually.
